

2009 "Field of the Year" for Professional Football

The prestigious Sports Turf Manager's Association (STMA) named Lambeau Field, home of the Green Bay Packers, its Field of the Year.

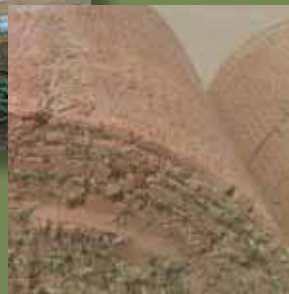

As part of its commitment to building sports fields of distinction, FIELDS played an integral part in the initial Lambeau football field reconstruction. In the winter of 2007, FIELDS was chosen by the Packers to build a new football field within the historic stadium. Since then, FIELDS has gone on to complete two additional practice fields for the Packers training camp.

These were completed in the summer of 2009.

FIELDS worked closely with D.A. Hogan, the consulting engineering and landscape architecture firm, as well as the Packers' Executive team and the Packers' Fields Manager, Allen Johnson, to produce this award-winning field.

FIELDS' team of landscape professionals worked under the most trying of conditions, including a northern Wisconsin winter, to demolish the old field and build a new sports field of distinction (for specific details of this project, please see http://www.fields-inc.com/case_histories_lambeau.html).
